Vanderbilt to be President of the Chief-American Bank.

Several New Cases of Yellow Fever Reported in Florida.

The Chief American Bank

San Francisco, Oct. 26. The steamer City of Peking brought Chinese papers containing copies of the articles of incorporation of the Chief American bank concerning which there has been so much controversy. The agreement consists of seven articles. The first article provides that the bank shall be known as the Chief American bank, and that its capital will be supervised and safe guarded by the executive government of China and the United States. The second article provides that the capital stock shall consist of ten million American dollars. The third article declares that Vanderbilt will act as president of the United States, but the vice president will be sent to China to attend to the business there. The remaining articles then provide for the conveyance of silver to and money by the bank, and for the issue of paper money to the amount of one half of the capital of the bank. The concessions further stipulate to the effect that the bank is to be the medium of all loans for construction of railway and telegraph lines in the empire are then cited. The agreement as published shows that the name of Vanderbilt was employed in the negotiations by Mckewles and that the United States government was mentioned as being cognizant of the proposed agreement. The Shanghai Courier speaks of the concession as having obtained all the rights [illegible] and that the bank would be established.

War with Indians.

Washington, October 26 - The secretary of the interior today received the following telegram from Indian inspector Armstrong at Crow Agency, Montana. Twenty Gros-ventre Indians will attempt to go to reservation en route across it to Shoshone agency. I have requested the military to stop them and hold them at the post until you can be [illegible] to go further at this time, but should be returned to their agency instruct, accordingly not to permit [illegible] until matters are settled. This telegram was transmitted to the war department with a request that the military authorities be instructed to return the twenty Indians to the agency to which they belong. The commissioner of Indian affairs has been instructed [illegible] Montana and adjoining territories to use every effort to keep their Indians on their reservations and not to permit any [illegible]

The War Claims.

Denver, October 26. A meeting of the officers of the late War will be held at the armory building, Champa street, on Friday evening, October 28th, inst., to consider the question of rescinding the action of the G. A. R. encampment in [illegible] the War Claims, certificates of indebtedness for such service, thereby depreciating the value of such certificates, and the credit of the state to some extent. A committee of officers called upon Governor Kingsley to-day and requested him to put the following stamp upon such certificates. He replied that the request would be complied with, provided that the Secretary of State would not object. The committee will call on the Attorney General to-day, and will ask him to go further at this time, but should be returned to their agency instruct, accordingly not to permit [illegible] until matters are settled. America does not invest much of her navy and has never tried to occupy the position of a John L. Sullivan among the nations but she can well feel that her greatness and latent strength are recognized when over two hundred members of the English parliament petition for a home commission. England never asked for anything yet that she could take.

The poor people of New Hampshire are to be generally pitied, for the legislature of that state, which has been in session since last spring, has voted to [illegible] the time of final adjournment and the session will be indefinitely prolonged. To add to this misfortune, the legislature is practically owned by railroad corporations and has yet failed to make the necessary appropriations for the support of the state government.

The republicans of Virginia have high hopes of carrying that state this year. Ex-Congressman John S. Barbour, one of the leaders of the democracy in the state, has been in New York recently. It is said seeking subscriptions to help carry the elections. He represented to the faithful that the party was in a bad way. The ex-congressman was chiefly instrumental in organizing the democratic party in Virginia after the war. When the legislature met he was elected to the United States senate but was defeated and immediately departed for Europe. Owing to his absence the republicans made large gains and he was only indicted by the democracy on his return this year and threw himself into the breach by the promise of Ed Rosewater's place should the party be successful in the coming election.

The democrats of New York city have renominated Colonel John R. Fellows for the office of district attorney. Their candidate has had a very checkered career. Born in a northern state, he fought in the confederate army. In Arkansas where he located after the war, he attained some official distinction through his oratorical ability. He removed to New York, where the leaders of Tammany Hall saw in him an effective political piece, and he was made an assistant in the district attorney's office. He has remained there ever since with the exception of one term. He is probably one of the worst men who could have been nominated. Steeped in debt, unprincipled, and of prodigate habits, he is just the kind of a man whom the plunderers of the public treasury would like to have as public prosecutor. His nomination was brought about by that corrupt element which seems to be the ruling power in the democratic party in the metropolis.

Just at present the civil service commission is occupying a large share of public attention by reason of the recent letter of Commissioner Oberly to an office holder in Illinois. He contends that the civil service law requires federal office holders to discharge entirely from any participation in politics, and does not attach [illegible] to any political clubs or organization. The stand which Mr. Oberly has taken is a pleasant contrast with the position on the "spoils" question before he was appointed on the commission. Mr. Oberly was a very persistent office seeker, and it was thought that when he was appointed Superintendent of Government Indian schools, that the days of his private postage would be ended. As a citizen of the Hoosier state, and one of the strongest advocates of the "spoils" idea, and the civil service law was to him merely nonsense. Mr. Oberly's change of base, may be due to a personal desire to further ingratiate himself in the confidence of the powers that be with a view to [illegible] advancement. His detractors [illegible] in this matter would hardly give him credit for being honest on this question.

The death of the Hon. Elihu B. Washburne of Illinois recalls a [illegible] of his services to the country. His public services were of a [illegible] character. He took a prominent part in the civil war struggle and was one of President Lincoln's most trusted supporters and counselors. Through his instrumentality General Grant obtained his commission in the union army, and he was always powerful in his support of the [illegible]. It was known as the "watch dog of the treasury" and opposed with all its power [illegible] which would give [illegible] of the people's money. While [illegible] United States minister to France he was [illegible] the duties during the Franco-German war. The manner in which he performed these duties commended him to [illegible] general opinion. His [illegible] of Mr. Washburne's [illegible] to liberty [illegible] Washburne [illegible] and [illegible] Washburne [illegible] which was confirmed [illegible] the feeling [illegible] that [illegible] which was [illegible] [illegible] many jurors who are influenced in rendering their verdicts by false appeals to their sympathies and feelings.

Victim of His Own Joke

Boston Letter to the Providence Journal.

An amusing incident occurred in Washington street this week which displeases me because I like to see practical jokers come to grief. Practical jokers rank in my mind with cads and others who have no professional rights with [illegible] bound to respect. The firm in question deals in foreign rugs and have their rooms up one flight. The entrance from the street is a wide one, and as they are accustomed to hang specimens of their wares [illegible] be possible customers. Unfortunately those displayed rugs proved as attractive to sneak thieves as to purchasers, and on one occasion [illegible] frequent depredations. To remedy this evil a stout cord was attached to each rug, and in turn fastened to a door post. The porter was instructed to [illegible] at the sound of the bell to pay [illegible] themselves as swiftly as possible to the floor, and on the very first occasion that the new arrangement was made a small [illegible] Irish Jew was [illegible] of one of the rugs. Not only was the unlucky wretch much frightened, but the trade papers had [illegible] prosecution he was forced to pay for all the rugs that had before been missing, although he protested volubly that he was innocent of their most [illegible]. Such another [illegible] was also recorded, but of [illegible] was made to [illegible] the fate of other pawned articles, factors in being sent down to [illegible] to collect on the validity of [illegible] and the cruelty of the [illegible].

By the time the [illegible] of the latter, who invented the [illegible] trap, had heard of the success of his [illegible] they had arrested [illegible] one of his friends [illegible] he would be extra [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] went into the [illegible] pockets.
